"IN THE BEGINNING GOD CREATED." There is something striking and majestic in these opening words of the Holy Scriptures. Our thoughts are turned at once by the inspired writer of the first book of the Bible, towards the Divine Being whose dealings with mankind are to be revealed and recorded. God created the world; He created man; He devised a plan for his redemption; and the prophetic announcement, the historical preparation for the Divine perfection of this plan of grace, and the glad announcement of its completion, is the golden cord that binds together in one harmonious whole the entire of the Holy Scriptures, and that has made this Holy Book so dear in all ages to the hearts of God's people.

The Bible, composed by many different authors, written at different times and places, and recording the dealings of God with His people for a period covering in time some thousands of years, is so woven together of prediction and fulfilment, by type and anti-type, by the heavenly word and the human response, that it forms one inseparable whole;—the Word of God, the warning of the sinner, and the unfailing guide and consolation of the believer.

The owner of this Bible died in 1971, and no relative claimed it. To prevent it from being sold ^{as junk} a friend gave it to me and said "save this Bible".
She has now found a Burnham cousin who wishes to claim the Bible and take it back to Indiana where it came from.
